HAPPY HOLIDAYS

The holidays have past and the new year has begun! Hopefully everyone had a lovely holiday season with your family and friends. Theodore Roosevelt loved spending the holiday season with his family! Theodore Roosevelt's joy for the holiday season can be read here in his letter to his sister Anna Roosevelt Cowles, December 26, 1890.

"But we had a lovely time here; and the children enjoyed it with the same wild rapture we ourselves felt twenty-five years ago; and I think I enjoyed it almost as much as the children. Even Kermit really liked his stocking and toys, though in abject terror of the menagerie of squeaking wooly animals which covered his table. Soon after seven Alice and Ted fairly gallopped (sic) into our room to look for their stockings—such nice stockings, with such an entrancing way of revealing in their bulging outlines the promise of what was inside. They burrowed into them with their eager, chubby little hands, and hailed each new treasure with sounds of delight.

Then after breakfast we all walked into the room where the big toys, so many of them were on the tables, and I suppose Alice and Ted came near to realizing the feelings of those who enter Paradise as they ever will on this earth. They worshipped all the wonderful things, and soon the trains of cars were loaded with the luridly imaginative beasts of Noah's Ark, while Buffalo Bill and his Indians walked in wonderful procession with soldiers and dolls, and my jaded mind had to find names for each of the new skin horses—by the way, one of their games is to lassoo (sic), throw and brand these skin horses."

WINTER NEWS

Due to blizzard effects, Theodore Roosevelt National Park was closed on December 26, 2016. The park received over 15 inches of snow causing unsafe road conditions. The park is currently back open but the full loop road is still closed. East River Road from Medora to Wind Canyon is open, but proceed with caution.

Always visit North Dakota Department of Transportation for additional road information at http://www.dot.nd.gov/travel-info-v2/ before venturing to the park. Never hesitate to call the North (701-842-2333) or South (701-623-4466) Visitor Centers to find out more about road closures and access in the park.

Even if you can't visit the badlands in the winter, you can catch your own winter views through the National Park Service air quality webcam. Visit www.nature.nps.gov/air/webcams to check out current pictures of Theodore Roosevelt National Park throughout the season!

"...its toughness and hardy endurance fitted it to contend with purely natural forces...to resist cold and wintery blasts or the heat of the thirsty summer, to wander away to new pastures, to plunge over the broken ground, and to plow its way through snow drifts or quagmires."

2016 AUDOBON CHRISTMAS BIRD COUNT

December 18th marked TRNP's Annual Audubon Christmas bird count. Park visitors and rangers braved the chilly North Dakota winds to spend the day counting birds. Park Rangers led visitors in searching out birds and counting as many as possible before they flew away! before they flew away! It was a successful day with 13 observers spotting 22 total species and 301 birds in all. Be sure to keep your eyes open for this annual event next winter!

BLIZZARD OF 1887

Back in the late 19th century, the land that is now Wyoming, Montana, and the Dakotas were mostly miles of open terrain, punctuated by the few brave settlers who braved isolation and hostile conditions in hopes of finding adventure and decent work. One of those who braved the frontier was Theodore Roosevelt and, like many others, came for the beef business. The fenceless open range meant ranchers could own massive herds of cattle. Between 1866 and 1885, around 5.7 million cattle were driven to market or northern ranges. Everything changed in the disastrous winter of 1886-1887.

"Waiting for a Chinook" by C.M. Russell

A blazing summer had scorched the prairies, so when snow started falling in early November much of the frontier's livestock was already starving and ill equipped for a hard winter. The problem became a catastrophe when, on January 9, 1887, a blizzard hit, covering parts of the Great Plains in more than 16 inches of snow and temperatures dropped to around 50 below. The cattle that didn't succumb to the cold eventually died due to starvation. When spring arrived, millions of animals were dead, with around 90 percent of the open range's cattle rotting where they fell. Many ranchers went bankrupt and others simply called it quits and moved back east where conditions appeared less punishing. Many called the event "The Great Die-Up."

Tens of thousands of cattle died in the Badlands in the winter of 1886-1887 and in the spring, the Little Missouri swelled onto its floodplain, surging with carcasses of innumerable cattle bobbled down the river. Roosevelt had been abroad during the devastating winter and was unaware of the horror until March of 1887. Upon his return to Medora, Roosevelt had found out he had lost over half his herd. Where he once thought to see a return on his many investments, Roosevelt now sought to minimize his losses. He wrote his sister Bamie, "I am planning to get out of [the ranching business]."

He would sell his interests in the Maltese Cross to his partners, and gradually divest himself of the Elkhorn. Although his ranch was used for numerous excursions and hunting trips, Roosevelt focuses his energies on writing and politics. He finished selling off his Elkhorn interests by 1898.

Heritage Outbound Winter Adventure

This year's Winter Adventure begins at 10:15 am at Fort Clark State Historic Site. Snowshoe across the archaeological site while discussing winter 200 years ago. Learn how the Missouri River has changed and look at some historic maps.

Enjoy a shared meal with fellow adventurers at the Knife River Indian Villages National Historic Site Visitor Center and spend the afternoon snowshoeing through the Hidatsa villages. Share a snack and learn how people coped with winter conditions in the past. Back near the visitor center, warm up with hot tea as you learn to use flint and steel to start a fire, make traditional trail food, and learn about some winter survival skills. Even check out your bison hunting skills using atlatls to throw spears or compete with fellow adventurers using ice gliders. We will gather around a roaring fire in the earthlodge, for a traditional bison soup and bread. This unforgettable evening continues with traditional stories and music.

Sponsored by the Knife River Indian Villages National Historic Site, the Knife River Indian Heritage Foundation and the State Historical Society of North Dakota, registration is $65 per person. The fee includes two hearty meals, use of snowshoes, all activity supplies, and presentations. This outdoor program requires moderate physical activity and is recommended for ages 12 years and older. Participants are responsible for their own warm clothing, A memorable and safe experience for all participants is our goal. Warm drinks and indoor alternatives will be available throughout the day.

Contact Erik Holland at (701) 328-2792 or eholland@nd.gov with any questions. Register online at https://www.eventbrite.com/e/heritage-outbound-winter-adventure-2017-tickets-31224992794

Presidents' Day

Presidents' Day is an American holiday celebrated on the third Monday in February. Originally established in 1885 in recognition of President George Washington, it is officially called "Washington's Birthday" by the federal government. Traditionally celebrated on February 22. Washington's actual day of birth, the holiday became popularly known as Presidents' Day after it was moved as part of 1971's Uniform Monday Holiday Act in an attempt to create more three-day weekends for the nation's workers. While several states still have individual holidays honoring the birthdays of Washington, Abraham Lincoln and other figures, Presidents' Day is now popularly viewed as a day to celebrate all U.S. presidents past and present.

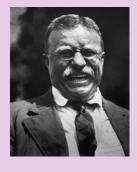

Today, the National Park Service cares for 417 sites in the United States and its territories. These 417 areas cover more than 84 million acres in every state, the District of Columbia, American Samoa, Guam, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands. Of the 417 units nearly 40 are dedicated to the history of the U.S. Presidents. Theodore Roosevelt National Park is just one of the many park sites featuring our 26th President with other sites including: Theodore Roosevelt Birthplace National Historic Site, Sagamore Hill National Historic Site, Theodore Roosevelt Inaugural National Historic Site, Theodore Roosevelt Island National Memorial, and Mount Rushmore National Memorial.

Theodore Roosevelt National Park is the only National Park named after a person. Celebrate Presidents' Day properly by visiting Theodore Roosevelt National Park and viewing the land that inspired Theodore Roosevelt to strive to protect it.

ARCHEOBLITZ AWARDED THE MARK E. MACK AWARD!

The Knife River Indian Villages National Historic Site, along with their many partners, were honored to receive First Place for the Mark E. Mack Community Engagement award at the 2017 annual meeting of the Society for Historical Archaeology (SHA) in Fort Worth, TX.

The Mark E. Mack awards are intended to honor those individuals or teams that exhibit outstanding best practices in community collaboration, engagement, and outreach in their historical archaeology and heritage preservation work.

Knife River Indian Villages NHS, the Midwest Archeological Center, and our project partners received the Mark E. Mack Community Engagement award for hosting the National Park Service's first ever ArcheoBlitz that was held at the park in May 2016.

The first-ever NPS "ArcheoBlitz" took place at Knife River Indian Villages NHS engaged 250 middle school students in archeological research. This event built on the popular "BioBlitz" model to involve the public in NPS field studies, but diverged significantly to incorporate archeological methods.

ELKHORN RANCH

The Elkhorn Ranch Unit of Theodore Roosevelt National Park is remotely located in the grassland along the Little Missouri River. As far as TR was concerned, the isolation was part of its charm; he considered his ranch a refuge from the hustle and bustle of society. The Elkhorn's calm solitude touched TR's heart so deeply that he never forgot his love of nature. He later became known as "the conservationist president" and the Father of Conservation because of the values he learned here. Though his ranch is long gone, foundation stones remain to remind us of the powerful significance of this place, truly an iconic site for the conservationist movement.

Theodore Roosevelt spent the better part of four years (1883-1887) ranching, hunting, exploring, and living the life of a cowboy in the badlands of western North Dakota. He fell in love with the landscape and invested in two ranches: the Maltese Cross Cabin and the Elkhorn. Theodore Roosevelt Presidential Library Foundation (TRPLF) is planning to recreate the Elkhorn Ranch cabin as the first structure on the Presidential Library site in Dickinson, ND.

The 30x60-foot cabin will be built using North Dakota cottonwoods, some from the Little Missouri River valley, using 1884 tools and techniques. Minimal concessions to 21st century protocols and building codes will be made.

Cottonwoods have been donated by the North Dakota Department of Corrections, which culled them from the banks of the Missouri River as part of a flood mitigation project.

Excerpts from "The Elkhorn Ranch" by Theodore Roosevelt Presidential Library Foundation in www.trpresidentiallibrary.org.

Prairie Rose

North Dakota designated the wild prairie rose (Rosa arkansana) as the official state flower in 1907. Roses are pink, white, red, or yellow and can have a wonderfully rich aroma. Often used for making syrups, jams, and tea. Come see the wild prairie rose in Theodore Roosevelt National Park coming this summer! Over 400 species of plants have been identified within the park, while over 500 may inhabit the park. What will you discover?

Her Hand in History: Sacagawea

Few figures in American history have attained legendary status like Sacagawea, the "Bird Women." Her story has been told and retold to millions of Americans, but despite her popularity little is actually known about her life. The details surrounding her origins, place and time of death, and even the spelling of her name are still hotly debated. What is clear is that her time living at the Knife River Villages proved fortuitous with the 1804 arrival of the Corps of Discovery led by Meriwether Lewis and William Clark.

A Lemhi Shoshone from present-day Idaho, she was captured at a young age by a Hidatsa raiding party and taken to the Knife River Indian Villages in North Dakota where she married a French-Canadian fur trader, Toussaint Charbonneau. In 1804 Lewis and Clark hired Charbonneau as an interpreter and Sacagawea, who was around 16 years old, joined the expedition due to her experience with the people and land farther to the west. In the end, she proved a valuable member of the expedition with her knowledge of the land and its people, all while caring for her infant son, Jean Baptiste.

Sacagawea returned with the expedition to the Knife River Villages in August 1806. It is believed she traveled south to St. Louis with Charbonneau in 1810 only to die at Fort Manual Lisa in present-day South Dakota from "putrid fever" in 1812. Other theories suggest later marriages and a death date as late as 1884.

No matter what ending you believe, Sacagawea achieved remarkable things during her lifetime and deserves recognition as a women before her time.

Excerpts from "Sacagawea" at www.nps.gov/knri/learn/historyculture/sacagawea.htm.

New Vault Toilets in the South Unit!

Ever wondered how your NPS entrance fees are being used? Well here's one way Theodore Roosevelt National Park is using your funds. Last fall two vault toilet buildings were installed in the South Unit. This one at Halliday Well trailhead and a 2nd one located on the loop road between Buck Hill and Coal Vein are receiving the finishing touches.

Theodore Roosevelt National Park was also concerned about the safety of animals who may fit in the ventilation of these buildings, so they teamed up with Teton Raptor Center's Poo-Poo Project. The Poo-Poo Project was developed to help prevent cavitynesting birds from entering vault toilets through the ventilation pipes and becoming entrapped in the 'basement' of vault toilets.

Each year thousands of cavity-nesters, animals that prefer dark, narrow spaces for nesting and roosting, become entrapped and die in vertical open pipes. Vault toilets feature vertical ventilation pipes that mimic the natural cavities preferred by some species for nesting and roosting. Birds enter the vault toilet through the ventilation pipe and get stuck in the 'basement' of the vault toilet.

In 2010, Teton Raptor Center addressed this problem by installing 100 'rock' screens on the ventilation pipes of toilets throughout Grand Teton National Park. In 2013, Teton Raptor Center created the Poo-Poo Project and developed its own Poo-Poo Screen to prevent wildlife entrapment on a national scale. Since 2013, the Teton Raptor Center has distributed over 8,000 Poo-Poo Screens to more than 240 Poo-Poo Partners in 32 states.

Fort Union Trading Post National Historic Site

Between 1828 and 1867, Fort Union was the most important fur trade post on the Upper Missouri River. Here, the Assiniboine and six other Northern Plains Indian Tribes exchanged bison furs and smaller furs for good from around the world, including cloth, guns, blankets, and beads. The post annually traded over 25,000 bison furs and $100,000 in merchandise.

Although called a fort, the post was neither a government nor a military installation, but a privately owned commercial establishment founded to engage in business with the Northern Plains Tribes. Built at the request of the Assiniboine nation, Fort Union Trading Post, then called Fort Union, quickly emerged as the Upper Missouri's most profitable fur trade post.

Take a self guided tour of the reconstructed fort and trade house or take a hike along the Bodmer Overlook hiking trail at Fort Union Trading Post NHS.

Knife River Indian Villages National Historic Site

The 1,758-acre Knife River Indian Villages preserves historic and archeological remnants of the culture and agricultural lifestyle of the Northern Plains Indians and indicates a possible 8,000-year span of inhabitation. Lewis and Clark passed through on their great expedition and gained the services of Charbonneau, a French Canadian, and his wife, Sacagawea, with their newborn

Take a tour around the full scale reconstructed Earthlodge, Hidatsa garden, and drying racks or hike down the Village Trail and see the remains of the Awatixa Xi'e Village and Awatixa Village. Hike along the Knife River and

MEMORIAL DAY REMEMBERED

For many Americans, Memorial Day is the official kick-off of summer, promising the first camping trip of the season or perhaps an outdoor barbecue. Memorial Day wasn't always celebrated on the last Monday in May, nor was it always called Memorial Day. The tradition of decorating the graves of fallen soldiers became various "Decoration Days" that were set aside to honor Civil War dead. During the 20th century, Decoration Day was expanded to include remembrance of the slain veterans of all US wars. The federal government declared Memorial Day a national holiday in 1967.

The official Veterans of Foreign Wars (VFW) website, the meaning of Memorial Day is described in this way: "Memorial Day is a sacred day to all war veterans. America's collective consciousness demands that all citizens be reminded of the deaths of their fellow countrymen during wartime. By honoring the nation's war dead, we preserve their memory and thus their service and sacrifice. Sacrifice is meaningless without remembrance."

As a staunch patriot and enthusiastic soldier that was also a dedicated participant in Decoration Day activities throughout his life, Theodore Roosevelt would probably have agreed with the VFW. In a Decoration Day speech he gave to the Long Island Farmer's Club, he said, "I do not even merely ask you to use every energy and every expedient of practical science to increase the food production of the country; I ask you in addition to volunteer for service during the war, both by coming forward into the armed forces of the nation, and by yourselves subscribing to the Liberty Loan."

Roosevelt was a highly decorated war hero and had instilled in his children a keen sense of patriotic duty. Five of his six children served in WWI, his four sons in the armed forces and his daughter Ethel as a nurse. Of the five, only four returned; Quentin was shot down over France in July 1918. Both Ted and Archie were wounded.

Although Quentin's death shattered Theodore Roosevelt, he did not deviate from his staunch patriotism. In a letter to his daughter-in-law Belle, he wrote, "I would not for all the world have had him fail fearlessly to do his duty, and to tread his allotted path, high of heart; even although it led to the gates of death. But it is useless for me to pretend that it is not very bitter to see that good, gallant, tender-hearted boy, leave life at its crest..."

Memorial Day is a day that is set aside specifically to honor America's war dead. While we enjoy our long weekend, our barbecues and our fishing, perhaps we should take a moment to remember those who have left "life at its crest" in the service of our country.

"I would rather have led that charge [up San Juan Hill] and earned my colonelcy than served three terms in the US Senate. It makes me feel as though I could now leave something to my children which will serve as an apology for my having existed. " - Theodore Roosevelt

TRNHA'S 63RD ANNUAL BIRDWALK AND BREAKFAST

The 63rd Annual Spring Bird Walk in Theodore Roosevelt National Park will be held in the park's South Unit on Sunday, June 4th. The bird walk is sponsored by Theodore Roosevelt Nature and History Association (TRNHA), the park's non-profit partner. TRHNA stocks and sells books, souvenirs, and other interpretive materials in the park visitor centers and donates the proceeds to Theodore Roosevelt National Park.

The leisurely one-hour stroll begins bright and early at 6:30 a.m. MDT and welcomes both novice and experienced birders alike. Participants will meet at the Cottonwood Campground registration area. Each year, 40-50 species are observed during this popular outing and during the last 20 years over 80 different species have been sighted.

Following the walk, at approximately 8:00 a.m., TRNHA will host breakfast at the Cottonwood Campground Picnic Area. Breakfast will be the traditional pancakes and sausage provided by Snack Shack! Breakfast is free will donations, any donations received will be used defray the cost of breakfast. Those interested in attending breakfast are encouraged to make reservations in order to assist in planning the event. To make reservations for the breakfast, call (701) 623-4884 or e-mail info@trnha.org.

Participants should bring binoculars, field guides, and keen eyes to help record the day's sightings!

BIRDS TO LOOK FOR IN TRNP!

Theodore Roosevelt National Park's habitat diversity provides homes and food sources for abundant bird life. More than 185 different bird species may be seen in the park at different times of the year. Here are some of the notable year-round residents you can find in the park!

Golden Eagle: The golden eagle is one of the largest, fastest, nimblest raptors in North America. Lustrous gold feathers gleam on the back of its head and neck; a powerful beak and talons advertise its hunting prowess.

Wild Turkey: These big, spectacular birds are common to see throughout the year, with their flocks striding around like miniature dinosaurs. Courting males puff themselves into feathery balls and fill the air with exuberant gobbling. Turkeys are found in every state but Alaska.

Black Capped Chickadee: A bird almost universally considered "cute" thanks to its oversized round head, tiny body, and curiosity about everything. The chickadee's black cap and bib; white cheeks; gray back; wings and tail; and whitish underside with buffy sides are distinctive.

White Breasted Nuthatch: These are active, agile little birds with an appetite for insects and large, meaty seeds. They get their common name from their habit of jamming large nuts and acorns into tree bark, then whacking them with their sharp bill to "hatch" out the seed from the inside.

Great Horned Owl: With its long, earlike tufts, intimidating yellow-eyed stare, and deep hooting voice, the Great Horned Owl is the quintessential owl of storybooks. This powerful predator can take down birds and mammals even larger than itself, but it also dines on daintier fare.

Photos and information taken from "All About Birds" at www.allaboutbirds.org of the Cornell Lab of Ornithology.

TRNP Celebrating 70 Years!

Within a short time after the death of Theodore Roosevelt on January 6, 1919, there were proposals to establish a memorial in his honor. The idea was proposed to the NPS Director Stephen T. Mather in 1928 in which he favored the establishment of a small national monument stating, "A national park does not seem justified."

Finally, on April 25, 1947, President Truman signed the bill that created Theodore Roosevelt National Memorial Park, which is lands that roughly make up the South Unit and Elkhorn Ranch Site. The North Unit was added on June 12, 1948.

On November 10, 1978, the area was given national park status when President Carter changed the memorial park to Theodore Roosevelt National Park.

A crowd gathers for the dedication of Theodore Roosevelt Memorial Park, 1949.

TOURISM TO ND NATIONAL PARKS CREATES MILLIONS IN ECONOMIC BENEFITS

A new NPS report shows that 793,383 visitors to Fort Union Trading Post National Historic Site, Knife River Indian Villages National Historic Site, and Theodore Roosevelt National Park in 2016 spent $49.579 million in communities near these parks. That spending supported 681 jobs in the surrounding areas.

"Last year's National Park Service Centennial events and the Find Your Park campaign brought record visitation to Theodore Roosevelt National Park and substantial increases to Fort Union Trading Post and Knife River Indian Village National Historic Sites," said Superintendent Wendy Ross. "The North Dakota national parks tell meaningful stories and protect cherished resources, and they are a significant driver in the state's tourism economy. We welcome visitors from across the country and around the world to experience these special places. We appreciate the partnership and support of our neighbors and are glad to be able to give back by helping to sustain local communities."

The peer reviewed visitor spending analysis was conducted by economists Catherine Cullinane Thomas of the U.S. Geological Survey and Lynne Koontz of the National Park Service. The report shows $18.4 billion of direct spending by 331million park visitors in communities within 60 miles of a national park. This spending supported 318,000 jobs nationally, with 271,544 jobs found in these gateway communities, and had a cumulative benefit to the U.S. economy of $39.5 billion. National park tourism is a significant driver in the national economy, returning more than $10 for every $1 invested in the National Park Service.

Although Theodore Roosevelt National Park has more than 185 different species of birds at different times of the year, there is still so much more the park has to offer! Be sure to come check out the prairie dog towns, the herds of bison and horses, and the wildflowers that are popping up after a long winter. Be sure to #findyourpark today!

Birding Tips!

- Research: Become familiar with the birds in your area; take a look online, check out a field guide, and ask for a common birds checklist at your local visitor center.
- Prepare: Bring binoculars, a good field guide, and a pen and notebook to keep track of your birding observations.
- Practice: Spot a bird with your eyes and bring binoculars up to your eyes without moving your head while keeping the bird in sight.
- Listen: While you are in the field, maintain your distance, keep quiet and listen for bird calls.
- Know the Rules: Make sure you are not harassing wildlife or encroaching on the management of species with a special status.
- Have fun!

HAVE YOU VISITED KNIFE RIVER'S EARTHLODGE?

With their mastery of agriculture, tribes living in the Upper Missouri River Valley developed a unique earth and wooden home to fit their sedentary lifestyle. The result of centuries of innovation and adaptation, the circular earthlodge of the Mandan, Hidatsa, and Arikara people was the perfect home for life on the Northern Plains.

Within traditional Hidatsa society, women owned and maintained the earthlodge or awahte. An older woman with the sacred and practical knowledge of earthlodge construction supervised the entire building process. The women cut four cottonwood posts and beams and, with the help of the men, erected a central support structure. The women then erected an outer circle of posts and cross beams, leaned split logs to form a wall, and lifted the rafters into place. On top of this framework, the women laid bunches of willow branches, dried prairie grass, and thick sod to complete the structure. The finished earthlodge would be between thirty and sixty feet in diameter, ten to fifteen feet high, and took approximately seven to ten days to complete from start to finish. The women rebuilt the earthlodges approximately every ten years.

An earthlodge housed between ten and twenty people, usually sisters and their families. Beds were located around the outer ring in the areas between support poles. Personal items were kept under the beds while general use items were kept on raised platforms similar to bed frames. A typical earthlodge also contained a corral for prized war and hunting ponies on one side of the door.

The main focus in the earthlodge was the central fire pit with smoke escaping through a hole in the roof. In the event of heavy rain or snow, an old bullboat could be turned over the hole and propped up to allow smoke to escape. Earthlodge occupants sat around the central fire on reed mats including the atuka, a high-sided seat reserved for the oldest man of the household. The atuka was also offered to visitors as a sign of respect.

The cache pit is a large bell-shaped hole in the floor lined with willow and dry grass and filled with dried corn, beans, squash, and sunflower. The women built several cache pits both inside and outside the earthlodge and covered them over to hide their location. Parfleches were rawhide containers hung from the ceiling used to store a variety of items such as clothes, dried foods, trade items, craft materials, and hides.

The tribes living along the Missouri River considered the earthlodge a sacred structure. The Hidatsa believed the spirit of the earthlodge resided in the four central posts and wrapped them with a hide or trade cloth as an offering. At the back of the earthlodge could be found a shrine containing sacred objects. Only the men who owned the objects were permitted to enter the space near the shrine.

Timber framed houses slowly replaced the earthlodge in the second half of the nineteenth century. The earthlodge lasted into the twentieth century as a ceremonial structure or in a secondary role as a barn or stable. Today, the earthlodge remains an important structure and symbol for the Three Affiliated Tribes (Mandan, Hidatsa, and Arikara).

In 1995, the National Park Service constructed a forty foot diameter earthlodge with traditional materials next to the Visitor Center. It is fully furnished and open to visitors during regular park hours.

TEDDY BEAR PICNIC SUCCESS

Seven years ago we began hosting Teddy Bear Picnics in Theodore Roosevelt National Park, at the time we never expect it to become an annual event. Kids learned about how the Teddy Bear got it's name, participated in nature activities, and met Smokey Bear.

Our very first picnic was held in the South Unit and brought in 17 people. Throughout the next few years the number varied from 20 to 50 people. However last year something changed as we added a picnic in the North Unit and began serving lunch at each picnic, and we were not prepared for the amazing results. The South Unit had the usual number of people but the North Unit amazed us with of 100 people joining us.

This year when planning the events we decided to plan for large numbers and are so happy we did. We were blown way at the excitement and shear number of children who attended this year. The event in the South Unit brought in 60 people and the North Unit brought in a record 173 people.

It truly was an amazing year for our Teddy Bear Picnics and we are excited to see families getting into the park! Mark your calendar for next year's picnics. Tentative dates are July 10th - South Unit and July 24th - North Unit.

WILDLAND FIRE IN TRNP

A lack of rain and extreme temperatures have led to a very dry National Park. On July 16th a small thunderstorm brought some lightening strikes to the park. Which resulted in two small fires burning just 2.5 miles apart in the North Dakota badlands. Thanks to the quick response of fire crews the blaze did not grow much and only burnt around 15 acres.

Rod Skalsky, Fire Management Officer, said "Without the teamwork and help from everyone things may have gone in a different. I would like to thank each and every individual that in some way contributed to the suppression effort."

FIRE RESTRICTIONS IN TRNP

Fire danger in the North and South Units of Theodore Roosevelt National Park is approaching critical levels due to hot and windy conditions. Additionally, the extended forecast from the National Weather Service is predicting near record heat with little or no precipitation. Check out the current drought status and the National Weather Service's Fire Danger Rating/Red Flag Warning map for the region.

Accordingly, the following restrictions are in effect until further notice:

NO FIRES ARE PERMITTED IN THE BACKCOUNTRY, INCLUDING GAS AND PROPANE STOVES NO SMOKING ON PARK TRAILS

SMOKING IS ONLY ALLOWED IN A DEVELOPED CAMPSITE/DEVELOPED PICNIC AREA OR IN A CLOSED VEHICLE GAS OR PROPANE STOVES ARE PERMITTED IN DESIGNATED CAMPGROUNDS AND PICNIC AREAS

Thank you for your cooperation.

DAKOTA NIGHTS ASTRONOMY FESTIVAL

September 15-17, 2017

Join astronomers, rangers, and historians as they come together for a three-day festival celebrating North Dakota's starry nights and rich heritage! Stand under the expansive night sky that influenced cultures of American Indian tribes, inspired modern space exploration, and is still yours to experience today!

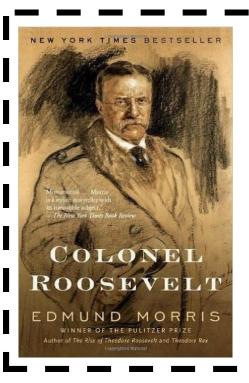

Theodore Roosevelt National Park and Historic Medora welcome you to evenings of star viewing, presentations by nationally recognized speakers, rocket building and launching, solar system hikes, and much more as we celebrate Dakota Nights!

Most activities are included with your park entry fee, except when otherwise noted.

Contact the park if you are interested in volunteering for the event.

VISITOR USE STUDY HAPPENING IN TRNP

Kansas State University, Clemson University and the University of Utah are teaming up to conduct a visitor use study at Theodore Roosevelt National Park. The study, funded by the park, will focus on understanding several visitor use related topics over the course of the next year.

Researchers from Clemson University and Kansas State University were at the park in early August. They were collecting surveys in the North and South units to better understand visitor's experiences while in the park. The research team was also collecting GPS data on how visitors move around both units of the park. This data will be used to help park managers understand visitor travel patterns and their perceptions of their experience. This date will hopefully help managers to better provide high quality experiences while still protecting the unique resources of the park.

A research team from the University of Utah will also be engaging members of local communities this Fall to understand how they interact with the

FOR THE BENEFIT & ENJOYMENT OF THE PEOPLE

By Kevin Kitzhoffer

In 1903, Theodore Roosevelt visited Yellowstone National Park and was asked to place the cornerstone for the archway that was being built at the northern entrance in Gardiner, Montana. This structure would eventually become known as the "Roosevelt Arch," and inscribed at the top is a quote from the Organic Act of 1872, the legislation which created Yellowstone National Park, which reads: "For the Benefit and Enjoyment of the People."

Nothing sums up the mission and purpose of our parks more precisely than those simple words, and nothing showcases the power of a democracy more than our public lands. In the United States of America, ordinary citizens are shareholders of the nation's most scenic and beautiful landscapes. If handled with care and with the right attitude, these lands may be passed on for future generations to enjoy as well. In order for that to be done, however, the people must have an appreciation for and understanding of our public lands. When these objectives are met, a magnificent change starts to take effect - people develop an intimate relationship with the land. They become stewards, caretakers, and volunteers.

This past Saturday, September 30th was National Public Lands Day, a day for volunteers to show their dedication and devotion. National Public Lands Day (NPLD) is the nation's largest, single-day volunteer event for public lands, and is held annually on the fourth Saturday in September. NPLD brings together hundreds of thousands of individual and organizational volunteers to help restore the country's public lands that belong to and are enjoyed by all of us. These include national parks, monuments, wildlife refuges, forests and grasslands, as well as state, county, and city parks that are managed by public agencies. The National Environmental Education Foundation (NEEF) coordinates NPLD, and support is also received from federal, state, and local organizations. Participating federal agencies include the Bureau of Land Management, National Park Service, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, and the U.S. Forest Service. In 2016, NPLD gathered over 200,000 volunteers across 2,600 sites across the nation. According to NEEF, $18 million worth of public land improvements were performed by these volunteers.

This year for NPLD, Theodore Roosevelt Nature and History Association conducted a trash pick-up at the Painted Canyon Visitor Center here at the park. Painted Canyon faithfully delivers on its breath-taking views and occasional animal visitors, but oftentimes, the heavy traffic and high winds bring in unwanted and unsightly litter. In just two hours, an entire kitchen trash bag was filled with cigarette butts, plastic food wrappers, and even a pair of matching hiking socks! Because of this help, the vista at Painted Canyon now has a renewed sparkle.

The message we send when we volunteer is one of love and respect for nature, as well as each other. Taking the initiative to make a difference helps build strong communities and builds character within ourselves. It shows that we care about the lands we have been provided, and reminds us of the promise we have made to the next generation. NPLD may only be one day in the month of September, but community service should be a year-round endeavor. Our public lands require an involved and engaged set of caretakers in order to preserve and protect them. If parks are truly for the benefit and enjoyment of people, then we must all do our part to help keep them that way.

DONATION FROM XTO ENERGY HELPS WITH EDUCATION

In July TRNHA submitted a request to XTO energy asking for assistance in bringing students to Theodore Roosevelt National Park's Dakota Nights Astronomy Festival. We were pleasantly surprised when a check for $2500 arrived to assist us with educating children about the night sky.

Thanks to this generous donation TRNHA assisted the park by paying for a bus of students to travel to the park from Marmoth, ND. Funds were also used to purchased journals, bracelets, two amazing tabletop telescopes, and other supplies which were used by Park Rangers to instill the love of Dakota nights in the children in attendance. The telescopes were our favorite investment as they will be used to education children throughout the next few years!

We would like to say thank you to XTO energy for their willingness to assist us in our efforts to educate local children and to foster a love for the great outdoors.

WELCOME BY KEVIN KITZHOFFER

Welcome! You've just arrived in the Little Missouri Badlands of North Dakota. You've bought your annual pass to the National Parks, and you've even obtained your map of Theodore Roosevelt National Park. Now you're wondering what to do first. May I make a suggestion? Head north.

There is plenty of adventure to be found at Theodore Roosevelt National Park, and a trip up to its North Unit should be a "must-see" on any visitor's itinerary. Geographically-speaking, this park isn't your typical looking blot on a map. Theodore Roosevelt National Park is comprised of 3 separate and distinct units totaling 70,447 acres (110 square miles) spread across the badlands of western North Dakota. The North Unit makes up over 24,000 acres of that area. Because of its location 52 miles north of Interstate 94 and 14 miles south of Watford City, terms like "quiet" and "remote" are often attached to this part of the park. In fact, the North Unit receives about three times less visitors than the South Unit receives every year. However, what this part of the park lacks in attendance makes up for it with rugged beauty, jaw-dropping vistas, and peaceful atmosphere.

Nothing makes for a more "peaceful" experience in a National Park than an overnight stay at the North Unit's Juniper Campground. Before you turn in for the night however, make sure you've driven the park's 14-mile scenic byway and taken stock of all that can be experienced up here. Stop by the eerily round Cannonball Concretions – these perfectly spherical boulders look out of this world! Next, bring your camera up to the River Bend Overlook (the most photographed spot in North Dakota) and admire the rustic architecture of the Overlook Shelter, built by the boys of the Civilian Conservation Corps in 1937. The drive concludes at the Oxbow Overlook, where one can gaze in astonishment at the colorful badlands formations that the Little Missouri River helped to create. In the North Unit, the scenic wonders have the ability to humble you. Disappointment has no residency here.

The local residents that do call the North Unit home are the wide varieties of birds and mammals that can be spotted around every corner of the park. Grazing bison and a herd of longhorn steer are common sights, but the chance to see bighorn sheep require sharp eyes and patience! The sound of a western meadowlark, or the crow of a ring-necked pheasant, creates a wild avian-symphony in the air of the badlands. Bring binoculars and a field guide when heading to the North Unit, just remember to view from a distance and treat Mother Nature with respect.

For those who like to experience National Parks on foot, the North Unit is a hiker's paradise. With 81% wilderness and miles of backcountry trails, this area is a top-tier destination for even the most experienced backpackers. The Buckhorn Trail and the Achenbach Trail provide the ultimate challenge for an overnight trek through the badlands. For those with little ones, or for those who prefer scenic rewards without having to carry much on their backs, the Caprock Coulee Trail and Little Mo Nature Trail provide fantastic, short day-hiking experiences. In the dry badlands of Theodore Roosevelt National Park, be sure to pack plenty of water wherever you go!

The list of reasons to make a trip up to the North Unit of the park is endless. It truly is a place that needs to be experienced rather than just read about in a book. In our 21st century techno-world, Facebook posts and Instagram photos don't quite capture the essence of what can be found in the North Unit, let alone all of the wild nature in our National Parks. These special places preserved for the benefit and enjoyment of each and every American are agents for lifetime experiences spent either alone or in the company of others. They are places where we contemplate and attempt to understand more about the world. They are the settings for the discovery of our greatest selves. Without a doubt, the North Unit provides that exact setting. My wish is that YOUR visit to the park includes a stop to this awe-inspiring place. Welcome to Theodore Roosevelt National Park! You've finally arrived!

HAVE YOU VISITED KNIFE RIVER INDIAN VILLAGES NHS?

There are many things to see and do at Knife River Indian Villages National Historic Site.

How much time do you have?

One or two hours:

- Watch the 15 minute orientation film Maxidiwiac about the life of Buffalo Bird Woman who lived at the Knife River Indian Villages
- Explore the museum and learn about the history and culture of the Hidatsa people. The exhibits feature artifacts recovered from the village sites as well as decorative arts of Northern Plains Indians.
- Head outside to see the full scale reconstructed Earthlodge, Hidatsa garden, and drying racks.
- Walk down the Village Trail (1.3 mi/2.1km) and see the remains of the Awatixa Xi'e Village (Lower Hidatsa Site) and Awatixa Village (Sakakawea Site). There is a loop at the second village site that includes a walk along the Knife River.

A half day:

 Hike the North Forest Trail loop (2.2 mi/3.5 km) through bottomland forest and native prairie.
 Continue onto the Missouri overlook loop (2.8

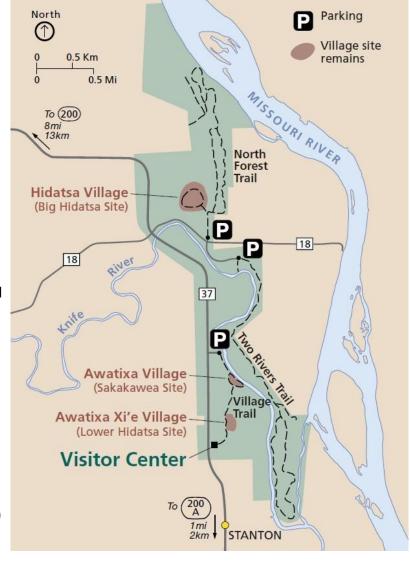

mi/4.5 km) for spectacular views of the Missouri River. Upon entering the forest, you can also choose to walk 0.1 miles on the Big Hidatsa Trail to the Hidatsa Village (Big Hidatsa Site)

• Grab your binoculars and a free birding checklist from the visitor center desk to help you spot your favorite raptors, waterfowl, thrushes, warblers, and many other birds along the park's trails.

A full day:

• Hike the Two Rivers Trail (6.2 mi/10 km) that follows the Knife River to the south end of the park. At the southern tip of the trail, you can see where the Knife River flows into the Missouri River.

Try your hand at catching northern pike, walleye, catfish, and trout along the Knife and Missouri Rivers. Knife River Indian Villages NHS follows North Dakota state rules and regulations. For more information, go to the North Dakota Game and Fish Department website.

BISON IN THEODORE ROOSEVELT NATIONAL PARK

Bison, the national mammal, once numbered in the tens of millions and were nearly driven to extinct by the 19th Century. Today, in conservation heads, their numbers have rebounded to around 30,000 bison. In the absence of natural predators, the park must manage bison populations to maintain a balanced ecosystem.

Every 2-3 years the park conducts a bison roundup in October, after the conclusion of their breeding season. Predetermined goals for age classes and sex ratios in the herd help determine which bison will be released back into the park and which will be removed, known as "culling". This year the park culled 144 bison out of the 441 that were captured and handled. The Intertribal Buffalo Council (ITBC) partners with Theodore Roosevelt National Park to determine were Bison will be distributed.

Buffalo vs. Bison Buffalo

- Two main species found in Africa and Asia
- · Huge sweeping arcs of horns
- · Short, thin layer of hair

Bison

- Found in North America and Europe
- Small, cow-like horns
- Very thick coat of hair with a pronounced "bear" looping around ribcage
- Faster than buffalo
- Have a large shoulder hump and massive head

What are Beefalo?

- Hybrid of domestic cattle (usually male) with bison (usually female)
- · Physically resemble cattle
- Created to combine characteristics of both animals for beef production

U.S. FISH AND WILDLIFE SERVICE EXPANDS HUNTING AND FISHING OPPORTUNITIES AT 10 NATIONAL WILDLIFE REFUGES

In a continuing effort to increase access to hunting and fishing on public lands, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service today announced a final rule to open or expand opportunities across 132,000 acres on 10 national wildlife refuges. This will bring the number of refuges where the public may hunt up to 373 and up to 311 where fishing is permitted.

Hunting, fishing and other outdoor activities contributed more than $156.3 billion in economic activity across the United States according to the Service's National Survey of Fishing, Hunting and Wildlife-Associated Recreation, published every five years. More than 101.6 million Americans – 40 percent of the U.S. population 16 and older – pursue wildlife-related recreation. The final rule opens more than 60,000 acres of Refuge System lands for hunting species not previously authorized in these areas.

"The nation's sportsmen and women lead the conservation of wildlife and their habitats throughout our nation. They are passionate about the outdoors and are committed to sustainably managing these resources for all Americans to enjoy. Refuges provide all Americans with places to hunt, fish, observe the natural world firsthand and experience the great outdoors," said Service Principal Deputy Director Greg Sheehan. "We are pleased to be able to offer hunting and fishing opportunities and other recreational activities where they are compatible with national wildlife refuge management goals."

Des Lacs National Wildlife Refuge: Open moose hunting for the first time. The refuge is already open to upland game and other big game hunting.

Upper Souris National Wildlife Refuge: Open moose and turkey hunting for the first time. Expand upland game and big game hunting. The refuge is already open to upland game hunting, other big game hunting, and sport fishing.

In January 2017, FWS staff from Upper Souris NWR assisted ND Game and Fish Department personnel in a wild turkey trapping and relocating effort. A neighboring refuge rancher was experiencing turkey depredation to his winter livestock hay and silage piles. Approximately 100 wild turkeys were captured and relocated to an area in the state with low turkey numbers.
